FOREWORD

Attention properly may be directed to the difference in the Calendar, commonly known as "Old Style" and "New Style".

Prior to 1752 the Julian Calendar was in force, the first month of the year being March, and the twelfth month February; New Year's Day being March 25. It was quite customary to double-date the years during certain months, as, for example, Jan. 15, 1682-3, this double-dating being used only for dates between January 1 and March 24 inclusive, March 25 always carrying the date of the new year, and the use of it for the first 24 days of March was quite universal, even if the writer did not use it for dates in January and February.

When the change was made from the Julian to the Gregorian Calendar in Great Britain by Act of Parliament, conformation with the civil, or solar, year was made in September, 1752, by dropping 11 days, so the day after September 2, 1752, was made September 14, 1752. Since that time the year is as at present constituted, the first month being January and the twelfth month December.

1. The first of these is the fact that the present system of taxation is not only unfair but also inefficient. It is unfair because it places a heavy burden on the poor and a light burden on the rich. It is inefficient because it does not encourage the production of goods and services which are most needed by the community.

2. The second of these is the fact that the present system of taxation is not only unfair but also inefficient. It is unfair because it places a heavy burden on the poor and a light burden on the rich. It is inefficient because it does not encourage the production of goods and services which are most needed by the community.

3. The third of these is the fact that the present system of taxation is not only unfair but also inefficient. It is unfair because it places a heavy burden on the poor and a light burden on the rich. It is inefficient because it does not encourage the production of goods and services which are most needed by the community.

4. The fourth of these is the fact that the present system of taxation is not only unfair but also inefficient. It is unfair because it places a heavy burden on the poor and a light burden on the rich. It is inefficient because it does not encourage the production of goods and services which are most needed by the community.

5. The fifth of these is the fact that the present system of taxation is not only unfair but also inefficient. It is unfair because it places a heavy burden on the poor and a light burden on the rich. It is inefficient because it does not encourage the production of goods and services which are most needed by the community.

6. The sixth of these is the fact that the present system of taxation is not only unfair but also inefficient. It is unfair because it places a heavy burden on the poor and a light burden on the rich. It is inefficient because it does not encourage the production of goods and services which are most needed by the community.

Notes

The first of the series of experiments was conducted on the 1st of January 1880. The object of the experiment was to determine the effect of the temperature of the water on the rate of the reaction. The results of the experiment were as follows:—

At 10° C. the rate of the reaction was 1.00
At 20° C. the rate of the reaction was 1.50
At 30° C. the rate of the reaction was 2.50
At 40° C. the rate of the reaction was 4.00
At 50° C. the rate of the reaction was 6.00
At 60° C. the rate of the reaction was 10.00
At 70° C. the rate of the reaction was 15.00
At 80° C. the rate of the reaction was 25.00
At 90° C. the rate of the reaction was 40.00
At 100° C. the rate of the reaction was 100.00

1880

The second of the series of experiments was conducted on the 1st of February 1880. The object of the experiment was to determine the effect of the concentration of the solution on the rate of the reaction. The results of the experiment were as follows:—

At 1.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 1.00
At 2.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 2.00
At 3.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 3.00
At 4.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 4.00
At 5.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 5.00
At 6.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 6.00
At 7.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 7.00
At 8.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 8.00
At 9.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 9.00
At 10.0 M. the rate of the reaction was 10.00

WINTER

482. JOHN¹ WINTER was early in Maine, and was appointed as the agent of the patentees of Richmond's Island, Me., 1831. The name of his wife is not seen, but he had at least three children, and he died in 1845. (Savage's Genealogical Dictionary, 4-806; Pope's Pioneers of Maine and New Hampshire, p. 240; Willis' History of Portland, Me., 1863, pp. 38, 42; Portland in the Past, 1886, p. 38.)

241. SARAH² WINTER (John¹), daughter of John Winter, married REV. ROBERT JORDAN. (Savage's Genealogical Dictionary, 2-569; Pope's Pioneers of Me. and N.H., p. 241; Portland in the Past, p. 68; Willis' History of Portland, p. 42; Jordan Memorial, 1882, p. 71.)

It is a very common mistake to suppose that the only way to get a good result is to use a large quantity of material. In fact, the best results are often obtained by using a small quantity of material which is carefully selected and prepared.

The following are some of the most common mistakes made in the use of materials. They are all easily avoided by a little care and attention.
